Weronika T. Adrian

Weronika T. Adrian, MSc (wta@agh.edu.pl, www) is a research assistant at AGH University of Science and Technology. She is a member of the GEIST Research Group, a founder member of the Polish Artificial Intelligence Society and a member of IEEE. She has cooperated with GEIST members since 2008.

Her main research interests cover Semantic Web technologies and logic programming. She is an author and co-author of 28 publications (the complete list is available in the AGH bibliographic system).

She has been involved in several national and international research projects: HeKatE, BIMLOQ, INDECT; and EU programs: Knowledge and Practice, it2edu. She is a laureate of the first edition of "Top 500 Innovators" project sponsored by Polish Ministry of Science and Higher Education within which she completed a 2-months program at Stanford University in autumn 2011.

Papers and awards

- 2011 – I have been ranked 7th in the pilot edition of the Top 500 Innovators programme sponsored by the Polish Ministry of Science and Higher Education]] and completed a program on Science-Management-Commercialization at Stanford University. For more information please see my testimonial at SCPD Website or read the blog I wrote with my colleagues.
- 2009 – distinction by Polish Information Processing Society in the XXVI Contest for The Best M.Sc. Thesis in Computer Science, for my MSc Thesis entitled Visual Rule Design Methods for Semantic Web Applications supervised by Grzegorz J. Nalepa
- 2009 – Best paper award at the ICCCI2009, together with Grzegorz J. Nalepa, for the paper Proposal of a New Rule-based Inference Scheme for the Semantic Web Applications, published in, New Challenges in Computational Collective Intelligence Series: Studies in Computational Intelligence, Vol. 244, Nguyen, Ngoc Thanh; Katarzyniak, Radoslaw; Janiak, Adam (Eds.), Springer, 2009.
